

$731,790 IN JOBS FALL TO DEMOCRATS WHEN SMITH TAKES OFFICE IN ALBANY

the salaries of those under him amount to an additional $68,500. In addition to this the appropriation for the department this year is $4,855,000, most of which goes for the maintenance of the canal, with hundreds of jobs.

Another plum which falls into the lap of the victors is that of the Public Buildings Department. The salary amount to $13,420 a year and upward of half a million is spent for upkeep.

The State Hospital Commission, with salaries amounting to $23,000, goes to the new Governor. Cyrus Jones, the lay Commissioner, died some time ago, and if Gov. Miller were to appoint his successor, his term would expire on Jan. 1. Dr. C. Floyd Haviland, whose salary is $10,000, stays or goes at the pleasure of the Governor. Adjutant Gen. J. Leslie Kincaid's term expires on Jan. 1. His salary is $7,500.

State Architect Lewis F. Pilcher, who has held office since 1919, finishes on Jan. 1. His salary is $10,000, and other salaries amount to $9,350 more. The State Board of Charities comes into the new Governor's keeping. The three members receive only their expenses, but there is a secretary with a salary of $5,000.

Superintendent of Insurance Francis R. Stoddard, with a salary of $10,000, has until July 1, 1924, to finish his term, unless he resigns. Eventually, the job will come to Gov. Smith with other salaries amounting to $30,500. There is the job of miscellaneous reporter, with a salary of $4,000 a year, which is now occupied by William Van Rensselaer, whose term expires July 1, 1926. If the job is wanted, it will be "got."

State Fair Commissioner Henry K. Williams goes out March 1 next and John H. Cahill in the following year. Gov. Smith appointed Cahill, so there will be no doubt as to where the salaries of $17,200 will go.

Salaries paid by the Board of Education and Control amounting to $20,520 will also find disposition at the hands of the Governor. Then the new Governor will appoint his own household, leaving the following vacancies in the Executive Chamber:

George Featherstone, Secretary to Gov. Miller, $7,000; William G. McCarthy, Assistant Secretary, $4,000; William C. Coogan, Military Secretary, $3,500; Counsel (now vacant), $5,500; George B. Graves, Executive Officer, $4,000; Walter Berry, confidential stenographer, $3,000.

The Court of Claims will be re-named by Gov. Smith, each with a salary of $8,000 and a clerk. The term of Judge William W. Webb expires Jan. 1, and that of former Lieut.-Gov. Jeremiah Wood on Jan. 13. Judge Wood was appointed by Gov. Miller after being pushed off the late lamented Republican State ticket. It looks as if Jerry got a gold brick after all. The term of Judge John B. Corwin expires Feb. 23, 1924.

Superintendent of State Police George F. Chandler, with a salary of $5,000, remains at the pleasure of the Governor. The term of George V. McLaughlin as Superintendent of Banks expires July 1, 1923. His salary is $10,000, and there are additional salaries amounting to $22,400.

The term of George K. Morris, Republican State Chairman, as Boxing Commissioner expires Jan. 1, 1923, and those of William Muldoon and Frank Dwyer, one year later. These positions carry no salary, but the salaries of the employees of the State Athletic Commission are $20,500.

Superintendent of Prisons Charles F. Rattigan holds on till Jan. 29, 1924. He is a Democrat and was appointed to the job by Gov. Smith. The salary is $5,000.

Gov.-Elect Smith will have the appointment of the successor to Walter H. Knapp, one of the three State Tax Commissioners, whose salary is $10,000. Commissioner John Jacob Merrill holds on till Jan. 1, 1925, and President Walter H. Low till Jan. 1, 1927. His salary is $12,000 a year, and Horace G. Tennant, secretary, receives $4,000.

This is one of Gov. Miller's departments, and there has been talk of its reorganization. It carries a lot of attractive jobs, the list of which is given below, because of the possibility of it being revamped. There is the campaign promise of changes in the laws creating the Council of Farms and Markets, Industrial Commission, Motion Picture Commission, Public Service and Transit Commission, for which reason they are considered in the tabulated list, which follows:

Motion Picture Commissioner Joseph Levenson is the only one of the three to go out on Jan. 1. The others follow in 1925 and 1926. The salary of each is $7,500 and expenses. Gov.-Elect Smith has promised to abolish the commission.

Outside of Farms and Markets, Industrial, Motion Picture, Public Service and Transit Commissioners, the following tabulated list shows the positions with their salaries which will flow to the Democrats after the inauguration on Jan. 1, of Alfred E. Smith as Governor of New York:

SHIP LINES ASK EARLY HEARING IN RUM CASE

Department of Justice Joins in Plea to Court.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The Supreme Court of the United States has taken under advisement the question of giving an early hearing to cases growing out of the attempt of foreign steamship companies to enjoin Government officials from enforcing the Daugherty ruling relative to carrying liquor on ships.

Through their attorney, George W. Wickersham, they moved that the appeal from Judge Learned Hand's decision be considered at the earliest date possible. The formal motion, in which the Department of Justice concurred, called attention to the importance of a prompt decision.

The companies represented were the Cunard Steamship, Oceanic Navigation, International Navigation, Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, Netherlands American Steam Navigation, Liverpool, Brazil and River Plate Steam Navigation, Royal Mail Steam Packet, United Steamship Company of Copenhagen, Pacific Steam Navigation and the Navigazione Generale Italiana.
